He rushed to the house of the Birlings where he was greeted with a warm and friendly welcome. The Birlings always had a very warm welcome for visitors. They had done nothing but be kind to Tom all night. The sight of Aladdin wearing the same clothes as the day before was interesting. He seemed to have slept well. Tom figured that he had been sleeping in Aladdin's room with a different set of clothes. He knocked on the door and Aladdin opened it. Tom said. "Good Morning." Aladdin gave Tom a warm and friendly hug. "Good morning to you also. I am sure that you have been very tired. I cannot thank you enough for what you did for me yesterday. You were very kind. You did not even want me to pay you for it. Thank you very much." Aladdin said as he walked into the house. "Well that is what friends are for. I hope you have enjoyed your visit." Tom said. "I have enjoyed it very much. I will be going now." Tom said as he turned to leave. "I am sorry that I cannot stay longer. I will see you tomorrow." Aladdin said. "I will see you tomorrow." Tom said as he started to walk away. The sun had not yet risen. Aladdin closed the door behind Tom and went back to his room. It was very strange how everyone on the street wanted to help Tom, but they all wanted to keep their identities secret. Tom went back to his room. He started to think about what to do. If he told his parents, he would be in trouble. He did not want to be in trouble. He did not know who had
