Counting over 17 million users, Pastebin is a website whose main role is to allow you to share text and source code. A good alternative to Google Docs and sometimes Twitter, for users who want to share updates that exceed 140 characters, the website makes it more convenient for developers to share snippets or large amounts of text. PasteEasy is a tool that simplifies the processes of sharing text on Pastebin, as it provides a quick way to copy and paste anything from your default clipboard directly. Allows you to set the expiration date and exposure The setup is a quick and straightforward operation that does not require special attention on your part. Even though you are logged in as guest by default at launch, you can include your account so that the users you are sharing the data with can find you easily. The rest of the time, the app is designed to run in the background and you can find it in the System Tray when necessary. The program comes with a minimalistic interface that consists of a window where you paste the text and several options. As previously mentioned, you can paste directly from the clipboard with just two click, as indicated in the window of the app. The options are limited to setting a title to the data you are sharing, specifying an expiration date of up to two months and whether you want the text to be public. A handy tool for anyone using Pastebin to share code and text In the eventuality that you are using Pastebin regularly to share or store snippets, but prefer a simpler way to copy and paste the source code, text or other similar data, then perhaps PasteEasy could come in handy. Not only does the app allow you to post the data for the desired time interval, but you can also make it hard to find for other users who are just snooping around.
