Commercial version After a frustrating few months trying to get my display to work properly with W7, I decided to try the Linux version of Windows. I downloaded the latest release from their website and started to install it... I have been running a VPS server for months using Ubuntu 12.04. I just upgraded to Ubuntu 12.10 and all is working very well. But I just came across a problem. When I start the system up for the first time (after upgrading the VPS), I get an error message. I cannot start my VPS on boot time. There is a very generic error message. The solution? The USB device in question is a USB 3.0 device. This is the exact message I get on boot time: The following packages have unmet dependencies: libcups2:i386 : Depends: libcupsimage2:i386 (>= 1.4.0) but it is not installable Depends: libcupsd:i386 (>= 1.4.0) but it is not installable Depends: libcupsdriver1:i386 (>= 1.4.0) but it is not installable Depends: libcupsppdc1:i386 (>= 1.4.0) but it is not installable Depends: libcupsfilters1:i386 (>= 1.4.0) but it is not installable Depends: libcupsmime1:i386 (>= 1.4.0) but it is not installable Depends: libcupsfilters1:i386 (>= 1.4.0) but it is not installable Depends: libcupsmime1:i386 (>= 1.4.0) but it is not installable Depends: libcupsppdc1:i386 (>= 1.4.0) but it is not
