In FIG. 2 the conventional pulse width modulation converter of this kind is shown. This pulse width modulation converter comprises a pulse oscillator 1 comprising a control circuit 1a connected to a voltage source 1b, a frequency determining circuit 1c connected to the pulse oscillator and a display driver circuit 1d connected to the frequency determining circuit 1c and to an electrode of a display 4. In operation, a signal which determines the frequency of the pulse oscillator 1 is outputted from the control circuit 1a of the pulse oscillator 1 and, as a result, the frequency of the pulse signal is determined. In the meantime, this pulse wave generator 1 is connected to a receiving circuit 6 which, as shown in FIG. 3, comprises a mixer 6a, a low pass filter 6b and a signal detector 6c. In operation, an input signal x is inputted to the receiving circuit 6 and the output signal from the signal detector 6c is inputted to a frequency determining circuit 6e of the pulse oscillator. Thereafter, the output signal from the frequency determining circuit 6e of the pulse oscillator is supplied as a control signal to the control circuit 1a of the pulse oscillator and as a result, the pulse width of a pulse signal to be produced by the pulse oscillator 1 is determined. However, the conventional pulse width modulation converter as described above has the following problem. In order to minimize the output impedance of the mixer 6a, the input capacitor 6c must be increased and, as a result, an error occurs in the quantity of the output signal which is determined by the signal detector 6c.in our paper, we did not

R., Dedicated to Fr. Bartholomew V., O.S.B. on the occasion of his 25th Anniversary of Ordination "Cerasumean, the biblical mistranslated as "Dormition" in modern Catholic translations, provides for a representation of a 19th-century image of the Annunciation that is much better suited for inclusion in art," says

Sister Mary Celine Galpin, the Regina Mater of Regina Coeli Convent in Lewiston, ME, and a member of the Custodians of Cerasumean Shrine. "We just needed more time to do research and get the translation exactly right." The Shrine was selected to house the new statue, which Sister Mary Celine Galpin and her sisters plan to erect on the grounds of the convent. Are you a fan of Renaissance Italian sculptors? Do you like this print of their work? If yes, you're in luck – this particular print is for sale. "This is an excellent example of a truly monumental sculpture [known as Francesco da Mantova]. He is the only artist of the Renaissance who received something close to universal fame," says John Siciliano, Senior Vice President and CEO of Italy-based auctioneer Bonhams. "We consider it the missing link between the Baroque and Classical Sculpture. This sculpture is in such demand that even now no less than 40 offers are currently being received for it." This print will be offered at an upcoming auction of Italian paintings, drawings, sculpture, and archeology, which is open to the public. Siciliano says that the print – which has a pre-sale estimate of $10,000 to $15,000 – will be offered "by far" the most valuable item in the auction. A conservation examination conducted by Bergamini & Douglas is under way at the Musikhaus Stuttgart in Germany. The institute in Germany is said to be the only one capable of handling these types of paintings. "Before restoration, the canvas is unrolled and inspected for any damage caused by the previous exhibition (at the Musikhaus)," explains a Bergamini & Douglas spokesperson. "It is then examined under polarized light, which reveals the overall paint pattern, i.e. where it differs from the underlying layers." An initial conservation treatment
