I'm writing an extension for Firefox, and I need to know the last time a user closed the browser to free some resources, but there isn't any method that's called when a user closes the browser. A: There are several methods of window.onbeforeunload but its best if you don't use this because there are malicious websites that use it like a pop up. You should use onunload which I believe is windows only but what you should do is somehow detect if the unload event was initiated by user or not. Other than that there is no way of knowing if the user has closed the browser by using the exit() function. EDIT: It was announced that Firefox 23 will contain this: You can use it to detect when the browser is closed, it is undocumented as I don't want to support unsupported APIs but you might want to. Q: Is it possible to use a Linux kernel running on a VPS as a VPC host kernel? I'm trying to use one of my VPS hosts as a VPC Host, and it only supports kernels from Red Hat Enterprise Linux (RHEL) 6 and 7. I would like to be able to run a Linux kernel which I could push to a server with out needing to manage a RHEL image. Is it possible to install a RHEL kernel onto a VPS and run it as a VPC Host kernel? Would it cause any stability issues? A: Unfortunately not, because the VPC host controls the root filesystem to which the VPC host kernel is attached. Because the VPC
