The following are some of the features that are in Adobe Photoshop or Elements: Editor: Image editor and retouching tools are the most common features of a graphics editor. To edit an image, you can use tools that are specific to a particular editing function such as resizing, cropping, straightening, rotating, deleting, adding text or adding elements. For example, you can use the square crop tool to crop an image, edit the cropped image and then save the image for future use.

The magic wand tool is a tool that helps you select the area of an image you want to edit. The tool automatically searches for a similar color to the color in the image. Layer masking is a layer based image editing feature. Layer masking makes it easy for you to edit an image that is in layers. You can add or remove the effect to a layer without affecting the image that is beneath that layer. Layer masking is also a great way to create a double expose effect or mask out any element in an image. Paint Bucket is a tool that is commonly used in painters to mix colors. There is an equivalent tool in Photoshop that helps you create new images from scratch in each color. You simply have to click and drag to create a new image. The selection tool allows you to select an area of an image and then use the selection to apply a filter or change the format of the image. The shape tool allows you to add basic shape objects like rectangles, ellipses, polygons and more. The free transform tool allows you to use the selections you create to rotate, stretch and scale an image. You can also change the rotation, scale and position of layers. The eyedropper tool lets you automatically choose the color you want to use in an image. You can use the eyedropper tool in painting, editing and cropping images. The rectangle selection tool helps you select an area. The lasso tool is a tool that creates a selection. You can use the lasso tool to move a selection across an image, select a shape, highlight an area, remove areas of an image, add small areas, remove areas or straighten an image. The type tool allows you to type new text or select text from an image. Some more advanced features of Photoshop are: Brush tool Clone Stamp tool Smudge tool

This Is Why The Vulnerability Of Smart Home Systems Is A Big Concern — It Could Be A Big Security Threat This Is Why The Vulnerability Of Smart Home Systems Is A Big Concern — It Could Be A Big Security Threat Nearly everybody has a home that's connected to the Internet, but that doesn't mean that your home is safe. While smart devices that connect to the Internet can be convenient, they're also prime targets for hacking. There are now a growing number of smart home devices that house all kinds of secrets, including personal information, accounts and passwords — and all they're good for is tricking people into providing them access to their devices. If you think your smart home devices are safe, think again. As the WIRED Security Lab notes in a new research paper titled “Connected to You, Connected to Them” (and a follow-up at the end of the week), many smart home systems are being attacked by malware, rogue apps, hacking tools and other kinds of tools that can snoop on your devices. Case in point: Smart home security cameras. Like other connected appliances, they let you control them in the present and receive alerts from your phone about what's going on at home. As with other connected devices, these security cameras contain a whole lot of potential vulnerabilities — and according to the new report, that's not just a theoretical concept. Smart home security devices are being attacked for a number of reasons, ranging from simple theft to hacking to warrantless surveillance. Take the case of a security camera hidden in a lamp. The researchers say that there are probably many cameras hidden in or on home products. It's a simple way to try and scare off intruders. (Obviously, the lamp also serves a functional role — but that doesn't mean you should just leave it lying around in your house.) “The findings in this paper demonstrate that simply having smart devices connected to home-networks is not sufficient for their security,” the paper reads. “We argue that the security of all smart device-connected to home networks — which increasingly include connected homes, smart appliances, and smart cars.” Of course, smart cars are a whole other beast. But in many cases, they have the potential to be far more dangerous. Take the case of home-based car hackers, for example: If you put your car in a garage

Colorado Rapids on Thursday announced the introduction of their new coaching staff led by former Seattle Sounders General Manager Adrian Hanauer. The club added head coach Pablo Mastroeni, assistant coaches and technical staff members Kevin Spangler, Pete Vagenas, Rodrigo Lopez, Igor Juliao, Chris Blanco, Chris Butler, and Carlos Borja. Mastroeni was named the head coach on July 1, 2018. “I’m excited to get to work,” Mastroeni said. “This is a new challenge and a new area. We have some quality leaders on this staff and I’m looking forward to learning from them. I’m excited to work on the philosophy and culture that we’ve shared over the past two years with our players, building on what they’ve brought into during the preseason. We have some tremendous structure and a fantastic group of talented people to work with. This is a great opportunity for myself and the club to continue to develop as a club. I look forward to working with all of our players and staff to bring a championship to Colorado.” Mastroeni spent the past two years with the Sounders as the club’s assistant general manager and team leader. During his time in Seattle, he helped guide the club to a Supporters' Shield (2016), MLS Cup Championship (2017) and U.S. Open Cup Final (2017). Prior to joining the Sounders, Mastroeni spent the 2011 through 2015 seasons with the Rapids, serving as the club's player-coach and assisting head coach. The Rapids named Mastroeni head coach on Nov. 7, 2012, and earned the All-Star Coaching Achievement Award for 2012 MLS Coach of the Year. "The biggest and best thing that made me want to come to Colorado was the organization and people that I met in Adrian Hanauer, Pádraig Smith and Conor Casey. I have the utmost respect for them all," Mastroeni said. "I'm honored to work with the entire staff and look forward to adding more great leaders on this staff." The Rapids also named former Rapids Head Coach Gary Smith as the team's defensive coach, adding former Rapids General Manager Paul Bravo as the club's fitness coach. "I'm looking forward to working with Pablo and the entire staff this year," Smith said. "P
