development and evaluation of novel therapeutics for treatment of blood diseases and for combating infectious diseases. The ERCFC is the only facility of its type in the United States to support this type of research. The facility is housed in the Red Cell Research and Development Laboratory (RCRD) of the Blood Research Institute at the

Harvard Medical School. The RCRD is adjacent to the other BRI facilities, including the Rocky Mountain Laboratories (RML) and the Blood Donor Services Laboratory (BDSL) of the Blood and Tissue Laboratory (BTL). The RCRD is also adjacent to the Harvard Medical School's Cancer Center, New England Research Institutes, and Children's Hospital. The RCRD has been in operation since 1976. It was developed as a collaborative effort between the BRI and the Harvard School of Public Health to address unique problems in the field of blood bank research. The mission of the BRI is to provide academic scientists with accurate and timely access to safe blood supplies and high quality blood products to support their research. Our principal mission is to support and enhance the blood supply for research purposes. In this regard, the BRI operates the only U.S. Blood Center and the only federally-licensed plasmapheresis facility within a 20-mile radius. The BRI is a laboratory animal supplier and supports research with non-human primates in the
