The bombs were planted at a post-mortem laboratory owned by a private hospital in the city and controlled by the Department of Forensic Science (DFS) for conducting legal post mortems. The deceased included three labourers, a DFS official and a police inspector, said chief inspector of police (crime) V S Gulkarni, who went to the site after receiving information about the blasts. "The incident took place when we were checking the motorbikes. When we came to know about the blasts, we reached the site and found that the detonators were placed on the bodies," Gulkarni said. He added that the motorbikes were booked under the Arms Act. The bombs, suspected to have been planted in the bags of the labourers, left behind as they returned home after the 11.30 am prayer, when they were killed. No arrests have been made so far. The death of the three labours was due to suffocation
