The Chinese Digital Library (CDL), created by the National Palace Museum in Taipei, National Central Library in Beijing, Chinese National Library in Taipei and the Dunhuang Academy of Humanities and Social Sciences, consists of nine depositories, i.e. the Archives Deposit, the Libraries Deposit, the Document Storage, the Digital Library Deposit, the Audio/Visual Materials Deposit, the Commentary Deposit, the Digital Enlightenment Deposit, the Video Deposit and the Digital Oasis Deposit. CDL has already been integrated with other databases Qianwen Zhongguo dapaidu chengwen (retrieved 2009-12-07) and Shidi Changhan = Containing 20,000 monographs published from the reign of Emperor Huang Ti to 1644, the first Chinese university to produce a printed dictionary and having been heavily influenced by the German Holzschnitt dictionary. This database forms a unified whole of the relevant Guo zhuang leihua literature Mu yuan shuxue tan yanjiu yanjiu xuebao (SHR). The database is freely accessible and represents a central reference for research on the subject. Describing in detail the situation, institutions and method used in the composition and publication of the Wuxi Dictionary, this database aims to provide free access to this information. With a total number of more than 400 entries, the database is a first step to providing the information from literature all together. Free links to the whole content are provided and a legend on the left hand side gives a detailed overview. Leo E. Simon Free Library is a nonprofit public academic library in the United States. It contains over 900,000 volumes, not including monographs, and has approximately 600,000 works in microform. Items run the gamut from literature and philosophy to law, medicine, astronomy, and the sciences. It has a collection of monographs and microforms, including archives and special collections on the Chinese Revolution, the Chinese Communist Party, China's modern history and contemporary culture, and twenty-first century China. 5ec8ef588b
